TWO BENNETT BOYS SHOT WHILE RIDERS WERE RAIDING.

One Found Dead in the Road Near Scene of a Battle--The Other Wounded But Refuses to Talk.

CHARLES CROUCH AND SON SHOW FIGHT.

Reports Sent Out Give Guarded Statements, One Report Being That They Were Night Riders.

Clarksville, Tenn., March 11.—Vaughn Bennett, who was shot Monday night in a mysterious manner on the roadside, died yesterday afternoon. Officers are making a thorough investigation of the affair, but so far nothing has been given out. Earl Bennett, who was also shot, still refuses to answer questions. Near Woodford, in this county, about sunrise Tuesday morning Vaughn Bennett, a young man of prominent family, was found lying in the Trough Spring road, a mile and a half from his home, shot through the temple, unconscious, and fatally wounded. One foot was in the stirrup of his saddle on his horse, which lay dead beside him. A few feet away was the dead body of another horse. Both horses were shot through the head. Three shot guns, two double and one single barrel, were found at the scene of the tragedy, one leaning against one of the horses and the others lying in the road, as if they had been carelessly dropped. Twelve or fifteen empty shells were lying just over the fence nearby. Both the horses were saddled and one was the property of Vaughn Bennett. The other belonged to his father, Henry Bennett. The weeds beside the road were trampled down as if by a number of horses and it is further reported that Bennett, when found, was masked, but the report could not be confirmed. Earl Bennett, a brother of Vaughn Bennett, was with his brother and was shot through the arm and shoulder. He says they were waylaid and shot from ambush as they were riding along the road. The shooting is thought to have occurred about 2 o'clock, as shots were heard about that time by people in the neighborhood.

NEAR SCENE OF BATTLE.

Night riders were abroad in Montgomery county last night. Near Port Royal Charles Crouch and his son, who are not members of any tobacco Association, were attacked and showed fight. A number of shots were exchanged and within a few hundred yards of this spot Vaughn Bennett was discovered, desperately wounded.

W. C. Cooksey and J. N. Woodson, nearest neighbors, found the wounded man at 6:30 a. m. and he was removed to the house of an old negro, John Woodson. He had two wounds, either of which would have caused death. One shot is said to have taken effect near the right eye, and the other near the right ear.

Earl Bennett is a younger brother of Vaughn Bennett, and although it is reported that he was seriously wounded he is said to have gone home, where he remained until this morning without telling anyone of his wounds. He is said to be shot through the right shoulder and right arm, while a third bullet grazed his head. It is said that he has refused to make any statement, except to say that he was waylaid and shot.

The Bennetts were sons of an association prize. Each has been arrested and is under a $1,000 bond.

Great excitement prevails and opinion varies as to how young Bennett was shot. Some think that he was a member of the night riders, while others believe that he was waylaid and fired upon by some unknown parties.

OTHER DEPREDACTIONS.

James Welch, a cropper on L. C. Adkins' farm, near Port Royal, was severely beaten by night riders the same night. All are said to have been masked. Seven of them went to the Port Royal telephone office, called Mallory Sawyer, the operator, to the door and told him to either cut the wires or give them a pair of pliers and they would do the work. The operator handed one of the crowd the pliers and he cut the wires. The wires were also cut two miles from Port Royal, between Clarksville and that place, and between Port Royal and Stroudville. Welch is said to wear marks of the beating he received.

Several nights ago Jonas Stacey, near Sango, is said to have been taken from his home and severely beaten. Since the assault he has been staying in Clarksville, but left the city last night.

SHOT SIX NEGROES.

Night Riders Invade New Territory In The Purchase.

Paducah, Ky., March 10.—A hundred masked riders rode into the town of Birmingham, Marshall county, last night, shot six negroes, one of them fatally and whipped 5 others. The riders took possession of the town and shot into every negro cabin in the place. In one of these was John Scruggs. His wife, three children and granddaughter were shot, and Scruggs fatally wounded. The riders then took five other negroes to the bank of Tennessee river, where they whipped them, and after warning them and all other negroes to leave the place, the men rode away.

The raid followed a warning of two weeks ago to the negroes to leave town.

TWO MINUTE SKETCHES

Alexander Hamilton.

By ROBERTUS LOVE.

He served as a balance wheel
in the building of the American machine

NOW that the people of the United States are in the throes of a renewed discussion of "centralization of power" as opposed to local state authority it is fitting to recall the man who in the formative period of our nation advocated more urgently and persistently than any other a strongly centralized federal government with correspondingly lesser authority for the individual states. This man was Alexander Hamilton. He stood for theories of government which, in the opinions of many persons of his day and this, tended toward monarchical rather than republican institutions.

Hamilton in the constitutional convention of 1787 proposed an independent executive to hold office for life or during good behavior, a senate whose members were to have a like tenure of office, governors of states to be appointed by the federal executive, thus making the states essentially subordinate to the central government in a sense much more emphatic than our present constitution requires.

Yet Hamilton vigorously supported the constitution as adopted by the convention. In Washington's cabinet he became the first secretary of the treasury, and his services in that high important post were of supreme value to the nation. His efficient and patriotic work in shaping the financial policies of the new nation gives him a secure place among the founders of the republic. Though for the most part his intensely federal ideas have not been adopted into our national fabric, though he distrusted the common people and believed in a government by the aristocracy rather than by the democracy, many of his theories were shared and accepted by his contemporaries. Hamilton may be said, served as a balance wheel in the building of the American machine, preventing a construction tending too far toward pure democracy in a time when a republic was still an experiment.

Hamilton's conception of patriotic duty prompted him to accept the challenge of Aaron Burr to the fatal duel at Weehawken. Hamilton shared the duel code of honor, but felt that a refusal to meet Burr would impair his future usefulness to his country.

"Good news travels fast," and the thousands of bad back sufferers in Hopkinsville are glad to learn that prompt relief is within their reach. Many a lame, weak and aching back is bad no more, thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills. Many people are telling the good news of their experience with the old Quaker Remedy. Here is an example worth reading.

R. H. Buck, living on South Franklin Street, Madisonville, Ky., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills is an exceedingly good remedy for kidney complaint and backache. I was never seriously troubled until about nine months ago I was taken with an attack of backache caused I think by a strain from over lifting. I was annoyed a good deal. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, and concluding to give them a trial, got a supply. They proved very satisfactory, curing the attack in a short time. Some time later, there were symptoms of a recurrence, and I appealed to Doan's Kidney Pills again. They relieved me in a short time, and they keep my kidneys in excellent condition."

NEW EXPLOSIVE.

More Powerful Than Dynamite and Safe to Handle.

W. S. Pierce, a Seattle chemist, has invented an explosive that, if it possesses all the advantages credited to it, will put dynamite in the shade. The invention is said to be the most important advance in powder manufacturing since maxinite, which is now in limited use in the British navy, says the Seattle Times.

The new explosive, according to Pierce, can be made 20 per cent stronger than what is known as 80 per cent dynamite, which is the most powerful explosive now manufactured with the exception of pure nitroglycerin. Its greatest advantage, however, is the safety with which it can be handled.

In the first place, no jar or blow will set it off. Pierce pounds the explosive on an anvil with a hammer to prove this. Moreover, it does not freeze, even at the temperature of liquid air, 300 degrees below zero. This is a great advantage not only in such countries as Alaska, but here. Du Pont powder, which is said to be manufactured by a secret process, congeals above the freezing point of water. This makes it necessary, as a rule, to thaw it out before it is fit for use, and thousands of lives have been sacrificed in the operation.

According to Pierce, his powder is smokeless. It leaves no noxious gases, which have so often resulted in the suffocation of men in the bottom of a shaft. It is not poisonous and can be swallowed without any ill result. It is not subject to atmospheric changes and is ignited by a detonating cap or an electric spark. Unlike dynamite, when ignited in the open air it will not explode, but simply bursts into flame. It can be manufactured much cheaper than the dynamite now in use.

BREATHING APPARATUS.

Device Enables Men to Work in Foul Air For Long Periods.

The various forms of apparatus hitherto devised for the purpose of making human existence possible in an irrespirable atmosphere have serious defects, which Dr. Tissot has succeeded in eliminating from the apparatus which he recently submitted to the Academy of Sciences of Paris.

Tissot's apparatus utilizes nasal respiration by means of two tubes inserted into the nostrils. Breathing ing through the mouth, indeed, is abnormal and fatiguing. Again, the incoming and outgoing air currents are kept separate. The exhaled air goes to the regeneration of the tin box and thence to a pouch of impermeable canvas inside of the bag. Oxygen is supplied by a tube containing 300 liters (334 pints) of the gas (compressed) and is consumed at the rate of two liters (about four pints) per minute during active labor and one liter per minute in walking.

Tissot's new apparatus is not a great incumbrance to the wearer. It weighs only twenty-eight pounds and is carried on the back, over which the weight is well distributed. The entire suppression of bags or other apparatus in front leaves the wearer free to crawl on his hands and knees, to use a pick or other tool—in short, to do almost any kind of hard work.

The superiority of the apparatus to its predecessors was strikingly demonstrated in the following experiments: A man equipped with the Tissot apparatus walked five hours without experiencing any difficulty in breathing. At the end of the experiment the inhaled air contained only 50 per cent of carbon dioxide, and 250 liters (552 pints) of oxygen were consumed.

Finally Dr. Tissot tested the stanchness of the apparatus by wearing it himself and remaining for three hours in an atmosphere of illuminating gas. He experienced no abnormal sensations. The employment of this apparatus, therefore, appears to be indicated in mines, in configurations, in burying wells, cesspools, etc. And one point of capital importance deserves especial emphasis. This apparatus makes possible for the first time prolonged work in an irrespirable atmosphere; hence it permits extensive repairs to be made without stopping the operation of smelting furnaces and blast furnaces.

Testing Electric Circuits.

In testing out electric circuits the following method is sure and simple: Twist the ends of the line together and attach two double bladed knives by closing the large blade of each knife, one on each wire. Open the little blades and cut through the insulation close to where the connections are made to the main line and test. The bell will ring when the work is done properly.

A Useful Invention.

A French invention, consisting of both thermometers projects at sundown whether there will be a frost.

Don't You Feel Well? Ache All Over?

Feverish? Feel as though your blood was hot? Cold? Cough? Backache? Those warning signals which indicate that "a bad cold" or a fever is coming on? Don't get discouraged, say no more. On the way, stop in any drug store and get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. When you get home, take a hot bath or a hot foot bath, go to bed, cover up warmly, take a dose of the "Golden Medical Discovery," in the morning another dose, and you will feel better. You will not have to continue many doses before you are well. If you still persist in the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery you will find improvement in your general constitution, appetite and blood—your liver will become active and throw off the poisons from the system.

Get as near to Nature's way as you can. There's a reason. Vegetable foods are usually good for the health. The human economy digests and assimilates them best. In disease, the remedy made up of Golden Seal root, Queen's root, Stone root, Black Cherry bark, Mandrake root and Bloodroot, such as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, is positive yet safe, is assimilated in the stomach and taken up by the blood, therefore it is the most potent means which can be employed for the repairing of lost health.

Microbes match at us from every corner. They mean to kill or eat us if they can. They are formed by millions as everything we eat, drink and wear. The air is filled with them. Medical science has proven in the past few years that nearly every disease is a germ disease. Such diseases germs enter into the blood in two ways, either through the lungs or through the stomach. The lungs are rich, the liver and stomach in healthy, active condition, the germs of disease cannot find a resting place there to multiply. Diseases of the lungs, bronchitis and consumption, grip and pneumonia, are very apt to spread through a face, where the blood is much more dense. The lungs become irritated and the blood is a fertile field for growth. Weakness, feelings of nervousness, colds and coughs are the warning signals which indicate that the system in the very best possible condition right away. Aid your body of the poisons that are apt to accumulate and your system is ready to ward off the attack of the germs of disease. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes red blood corpuscles. There is no alcohol in this great tonic to shiver up the red blood corpuscles. An alternative extract, made only of native medicinal roots, it goes about its work in nature's way. Only good can come from its use, as it is vigorous and tones the liver into proper action, and feeds the worn-out nerves, stomach and heart on pure blood.

"I am a firm believer in the value of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Joseph Napoleon Hennessey, Chairman Board of Health, of St. Paul Street, Montreal, Quebec. "Find that it has been of practical value to a number of men in my employ. They are especially exposed to influenza, colds, and other colds contracted run into pneumonia, however, since we have known of the value of Golden Medical Discovery, there is much less sickness, as this medicine seems to ward off colds and all other diseases. It is very good for a run-down system. I am pleased to acknowledge its worth."

Small heads, bad breath, bitter taste, colds, eruptions or itching of the skin, or any of the above, are small doses, only one or two pills, four or five times a day, will cure them. The Original Golden Medical Discovery, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, is the only one that will cure them.

TWO MINUTE SKETCHES

Alexander T. Stewart.

By ROBERTUS LOVE.

For forty years the merchant king.

A. T. STEWART was not a merchant prince. He was the merchant king. For forty years he reigned with undisputed title. He was the greatest and most famous merchant of his time in the entire world. He built up the first really great retail store and wholesale establishment in America. His retail house was the largest in the world at the time. His name was powerful abroad, and throughout the United States it was a household word, spoken with awe and wonder. Old men of today recall the name of A. T. Stewart as an inspiration to business ambition in their youth. Men in early middle life remember that the same name was more familiar to them than that of any other business man when they were small boys.

Mr. Stewart died thirty-one years ago, leaving no children. His widow died ten years later. The magnificent marble mansion in which he lived on Fifth Avenue, New York, has been razed and replaced by a commercial structure. Eleven years ago his successors in the great store on Broadway assigned, and the Stewart store building is now a Wanamaker establishment. Even the body of Stewart was stolen from its vault in New York, and there is still a dispute as to whether it ever was recovered. The Stewart name and business and fortune all have disappeared, but his fame lives.

A. T. Stewart was a Scotch-Irishman, born in Ireland and educated at Dublin University. He was a classical scholar, devoted to books in his early life and with no idea of entering trade. When he came to America, at the age of twenty, in 1823, he became a teacher in New York. Two years later he returned to Ireland to claim a legacy of about $5,000, and upon the advice of a friend in New York he bought in Dublin a stock of linens and other goods, which he brought back to America with him. He opened a small shop, advertised his wares and sold the goods at an enormous profit. This success revolutionized Stewart. He devoted his life to trade.

At the outset Stewart made up his mind as to his course in business. He determined to be perfectly honest, never to misrepresent his goods, always to watch every nook and corner of his business and to add more customers by pleasing those he had. It was his habit in old age that in all his career he never permitted a willful misrepresentation to be made in his store.

There's nothing so good for a sore throat as Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Cures it in few hours. Relieves any pain in any part.

The National for March.

As sparkling and invigorating as a bright day in early spring, the National Magazine for March greets its readers with a great variety of good things which fully sustain the reputation of this popular periodical. In addition to the regular departments "Affairs at Washington," "The Home," "The Happy Habit," and "Let's Talk it Over," all entertaining, instructive and inspiring, there are special features of vital interest. Chief of these is "Secretary Taft's Own Story of His Tour Around the World, in which he gives a colloquial, chatty account of his trip, the special topics being suggested by the snap-shots taken by Robert L. Dunn, and which are used to illustrate the story. With the pictures before him calling up incidents and movements, the secretary has furnished stories of his world tour that are veritable leaves from his own diary. He seemed to be transported bodily to the far-off land depicted, and to be living over again his experiences there, when the kodak was used at the psychological moment.

RIOT CLAUSE NOT GOOD LAW.

So Decides Circuit Judge J. F. Gordon, in Case at Princeton.

COMPANIES MUST PAY

For Property Destroyed By Night Riders in Spite of the Clause.

In the important insurance case at Princeton, to test the "riot clause" in the insurance policies held by the Imperial Tobacco Co. on property destroyed by night riders Dec. 1, 1906, Judge J. F. Gordon has decided against the companies. The case was argued by Judge Malcolm Yeaman, of Henderson, for the Imperial, on a motion to demur.

Judge Gordon Tuesday rendered his opinion, sustaining the demurrer. The principal grounds are that the "mob clause" in the insurance policies does not refer to fire but to loss due to other means, and, secondly, that the organization of incendiaries was not the kind contemplated in the use of the term "mob" or "rioters."

An appeal will be taken by the insurance companies. The insurance companies assert that they will cancel all tobacco insurance in the State if the Court of Appeals affirms the decision.

NEW SYSTEM OF AWARDING PRIZES.

No County That Has an Exhibit at the 1908 Tennessee State Fair Need Go Away Empty-Handed.

Nashville, Tenn., March 11, 1908.—The plan for awarding the prize money for the county exhibits at the Tennessee State Fair next fall is the fairest that has yet been tried. Under the scale of awards as just completed the counties in the extreme eastern and western portions of Tennessee will have just as good a chance to get a cash award as will the counties adjoining Davidson.

Besides $1,000 in prizes for the four best county exhibits at the fair, $100 is offered for the best display from each grand division of the State, and $1,200 will be prorated to all counties making any showing at all.

In this latter contest the money will be awarded on points. The various agricultural products, the decoration and the general arrangement will count 2,500 points, and the distance from the fair grounds will count 500 points more. These points will be divided as follows: Counties whose county seat is within a radius of 50 miles of Nashville will receive 100 points, and 100 points additional will be given for each 50 miles up to the 500 points. In this way, it is possible for distant counties to come in and get a share of the awards under any circumstances. With the knowledge that they will not go away empty-handed, the county that could not otherwise afford to get up a creditable exhibit on account of the distance handicap, can now go to the necessary expense to make a display that will have a chance to win the prize as the best from its section of the State, anyway, and will be encouraged to try to have the best the best shown at the fair.

Persons interested can get the desired information from J. W. Russell, Nashville, the Secretary of the State Fair.

To Lecture March 20.

Rev. Millard A. Jenkins will repeat his lecture, "The Music of Life," at Bethel Female College on the evening of March 20, for the benefit of the pavement fund of the college. The admission will be 25 cents. Dr. Jenkins' lecture is humorous, eloquent and most entertaining.

PERUNA EDITORIAL NO. 2.

Dr. Hartman has claimed for many years that Peruna is an EXCELLENT CATARRH REMEDY. Some of the doctor's critics have disputed the doctor's claim as to the efficacy of Peruna.

Since the ingredients of Peruna are no longer a secret, what do the medical authorities say concerning the remedies of which Peruna is composed? Take, for instance, the ingredient HYDRASTIS CANADENSIS, OR GOLDEN SEAL. The United States Dispensary says of this herbal remedy, that it is largely employed in the treatment of depraved mucous membranes, chronic rhinitis (nasal catarrh), atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), chronic intestinal catarrh, catarrh of the liver, and in diseased mucous membranes of the throat. It is also recommended for the treatment of various forms of diseases peculiar to women.

Another ingredient of Peruna, CORYDALIS FORMOSA, is placed in the United States Dispensary as a tonic.

CEDRON SEEDS is another ingredient of Peruna, an excellent drug that has been very largely overlooked by the medical profession for the past fifty years. THE SEEDS ARE TO BE FOUND IN VERY FEW DRUG STORES. The United States Dispensary says of the action of cedron that it is used as a bitter tonic and in the treatment of dysentery, and in intermittent diseases as a SUBSTITUTE FOR QUININE.

OIL OF COPAIBA, another ingredient of Peruna, is placed by the United States Dispensary as a mild stimulant and diuretic. It acts on the stomach and intestinal tract. It acts as a stimulant on the genito-urinary membranes.

Useful in chronic cystitis, chronic dysentery and diarrhea, and some chronic diseases of the liver and kidneys. These opinions as to the ingredients of Peruna are held by all writers on the subject, including Bartholow and Bowdler.

OF HYDRASTIS, BARTHOLOW SAYS it is applicable to stomatitis (catarrh of the mucous surfaces of the mouth), follicular pharyngitis (catarrh of the pharynx), chronic coryza (catarrh of the head). This writer classes hydrastis as a stomachic tonic, useful in atonic dyspepsia (chronic gastric catarrh), catarrh of the duodenum, catarrh of the gall duct, catarrh of the intestines, catarrh of the kidneys (chronic Bright's disease), catarrh of the bladder, and catarrh of other pelvic organs.

BARTHOLOW REGARDS COPAIBA as an excellent remedy for chronic catarrh of the bladder, chronic bronchitis (catarrh of the bronchial tubes). BARTHOLOW STATES THAT CUBER, an ingredient of Peruna, promotes the appetite and digestion, increases the circulation of the blood. Useful in chronic nasal catarrh, follicular pharyngitis (catarrh of the pharynx), increasing the tonicity of the mucous membranes of the throat. It also relieves hoarseness. Useful in atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), and in chronic catarrh of the colon and rectum, catarrh of the bladder, prostaticorrhea, and chronic bronchial affections.

MILLSAUGH, MEDICAL PLANTS, one of the most authoritative works on medicinal herbs in the English language, in commenting upon COLLINSORIA CANADENSIS, says that it acts on the pneumogastric and vaso motor nerves. It increases the secretions of the mucous membranes in general. In the mountains of Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Carolina, Collinsoria canadensis is considered a panacea for many disorders, including headache, colic, cramp, dropsy and indigestion. DR. SCUDDER regards it highly as a remedy in chronic diseases of the lungs, heart disease and asthma.

These citations ought to be sufficient to show to any candid mind that Peruna is a catarrh remedy. Surely, such herbal remedies, that command the enthusiastic confidence of the highest authorities obtainable, brought together in proper combination, ought to make a catarrh remedy of the highest efficiency. This is our claim, and we are able to substantiate this claim by ample quotations from the HIGHEST MEDICAL AUTHORITIES IN THE WORLD.

NIGHT RIDERS

Take Thresher From Barn, Apply The Torch And Notify Owner.

Clarksville, Tenn., March 9.—The night riders visited the farm of Doc Foust, near Port Royal, and removed a thresher owned by John Langford from a barn and set fire to it. The farm was recently sold to Foust by Langford, who removed to Sumner county on account of the many depredations in this section. He left his thresher on the farm until the roads became more favorable, when he intended removing it. The night riders were careful not to destroy anything else but the thresher. After it was ablaze they went to the home of Mr. Foust, told him what they had done and went to the fire and kept a watch so nothing else would burn. They also visited a nearby neighbor, and left word with him to go to Foust's farm and watch the burning of Langford's thresher so as to prevent any other property being destroyed.

Sent to Jail.

Roy Bowles, a well known police court character, is in jail on a charge of assaulting and attempting to rob an old umbrella mender named James McCue. The police arrested Bowles and turned him over to the county authorities and the grand jury will investigate the case.

ATLANTIC HEARS

FROM THE PACIFIC.

Wireless Message From Evans' Armada Is Received at Pensacola, Fla.

Washington D. C., March 9.—About a week ago the navy department expected to hear from the Atlantic battle-ship fleet for at least six months was on the Atlantic coast, yet this is what happened. The navy department today received a telegraphic message from its wireless station at Pensacola which had been in direct communication with the battle-ship fleet, a most remarkable performance, considering that the wireless impulses were obliged to traverse the Gulf of Mexico, then cross overland the state of Texas, part of Mexico and again traverse several hundred miles of ocean.

The particular message was from Rear Admiral Thomas, in command of the second division and was as follows:

"Have you any important news from home?"

An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14-37 north, longitude 102-01 west."

Local Leaflets.

Peaches certainly had a close call Monday night.

The Fiscal Court will meet the first of April. It held no meeting this month.

Some of the eared-for lawns are looking beautiful and the grass is about tall enough for the first mowing.

Boys, get your guns. The Legislature is about to pass a bill to pay a dollar for every hawk and owl killed.

The ministers of the city have set the hour for prayer meeting and Sunday night services at 7:30 until the summer months.

Mighty muddy buggies coming to town now, and they tell a story of mighty muddy roads, too. But improvements will begin soon.

There is no reason why eggs should be still selling at twenty cents a dozen—unless the large cities want them more than we do and are willing to pay the price.

The Forbes Mfg Co. expects to get into their new office building soon and will have the handsomest quarters in the city—just as pretty as one of our five beautiful banks.

Mrs. Wm. C. Chilton, of Mississippi, Hopkinsville's favorite reader, will be at the Tabernacle late in this month. But don't forget the Parland-Newhall Co. on the night of March 17th.

Some men are growling about "the hard times," but a contractor remarked the other day that he has been bidding on more plans for homes than he ever has before. Queer, isn't it?

Next Tuesday, the 17th, will be St. Patrick's day. As tradition says there were three St. Patricks you can "pick your man" and celebrate as you please, so you don't run foul the cop.

This paper spoke in the fall of the large number of deaths from consumption. A table soon to be published shows that 132 people have died from the disease in six years in the city.

Actors are playing "A Lucky Dog" in Louisville. Two weeks ago the boys were playing "The Unlucky Dog" by getting fifteen cents for every dog that didn't wear a collar. Every canine in Hopkinsville is thus far "A Lucky Dog," as the dog tax has not yet passed the council.

Some one has said that the Sunday school is no longer for children only. This is the age of Bible study and there is not a church in the city that has not its Bible class, composed of adults. The average Bible student of today is more familiar, probably, with the Scriptures than the school superintendent of twenty-five years ago.

March has been true to itself this week, giving us sunshine, rain, snow and sleet and freezes thrown in for good count, but it is a well settled fact that the farmer will have to buy his ice this year. But when you think of what his last year's crop of tobacco is going to, or has already brought, he can afford it better than the town man.

Judge Henson Renders Decision Involving C. P. Church at Sturgis.

Morganfield, Ky., March 9.—Judge J. W. Henson, in a decision involving the Cumberland Presbyterian church at Sturgis holds that the general assembly of the church violated its constitutional authority in consolidating with the Presbyterian church.

The "Loyal" members were denied the use of the church property, which by the decision they now recover.

The case involved many churches and the suit will be carried to the highest courts.

THE Princess Virginia

By C. A. and A. M. WILLIAMSON,
Authors of "The Lightning Conductor," "Romance in Search of a Father," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY MCCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

"He wishes to marry-me?" she echoed dazedly. "Why?"

"Providence must have drawn your inclination toward him, dearest. It is indeed a romance. Some day, no doubt, it will be to the world in history."

"But how did he—Virginia broke off and began again. "Did he tell this to Dal and ask him to write you?"

"Not—not precisely that," admitted the grand duchess, her face changing from satisfaction to uneasiness, for Virginia was difficult in some ways, though adorable in others, and held such peculiar ideas about life—inherited from her American grandmother—that it was impossible to be sure how she would receive the most ordinary announcements.

"The princess' rapt expression faded like a passing of the wind."

"Not precisely that?" she repeated. "Then what—how?"

"Well, perhaps, though it's not strictly the correct thing, you had better read your brother's letter for yourself."

Virginia put her hands behind her back with a childish gesture, and a frightened look came into the eye which at most times glared bravely out on the world. "I—somehow I can't," she said. "Please tell me."

"To begin with, then, you know when an admittance Dal has felt for Count

"He wishes to marry-me?"

von Breitslein ever since that diplomatic visit the Rhaetian chancellor paid to Hungary. The fancy seemed to be mutual; but then, who could ever resist Dal if he wanted to be liked? The chancellor has written to him from time to time, and Dal has quite enjoyed the correspondence. The old man can be witty as well as cynical if he chooses, and Dal says he tells good stories. Now, it seems, in the informal way in which such affairs are usually put forward, that Count von Breitslein has written confidentially to Dal, as his only near male relative, asking how your family would regard an alliance between Leopold and you, or if he has already disposed of your hand. At last the emperor is inclined to listen to his chancellor's advice and marry, and you, as a Protestant princess—

"A Protestant princess, indeed!" cried Virginia. "I protest against being approached by him on such terms."

"The face of the world seemed up to you, and reviews of new books—one can keep intelligently up with the times at a minimum cost of time, effort and money."

"I was not praying for it," said Virginia. "I'm sure, mother, you would have considered it most bold in me to pray for it. And I didn't. I was only refusing other chances."

"Well, at all events, you have this one now. It is yours."

"Not in the one way I should have loved to see it come. Oh, mother, why does the emperor want to marry me? Isn't there some other reason than just because I'm a proper Protestant princess?"

"Of course," insisted the grand duchess, faintly encouraged. "Dal mentions several most excellent reasons in his letter, if you would only take them seriously."

"I should like to hear them, at all events," answered Virginia.

"Well, you see, the empress of Rhaetia must be a Protestant, and there aren't many eligible Protestant girls who would be acceptable to the Rhaetians—girls who would be popular with the people. Oh, I have finished about that. You need not look so desperate. Besides, Dal explains that Leopold is a young man who dominates all around him. He wishes to take for his bride a girl who could not by any possibility herself be heiress to a throne. Dal fancies this his desire is to mold his wife and therefore to take a girl who would be too important to be disappointed."

ness by using the wealth or position of a woman. He has all he needs or wants of that sort. And then, Dal reminds me, Leopold is very partial to England, which helped Rhaetia passively in the time of her trouble eight years ago. The fact that you have lived in England and had an English education would be favorably regarded both by Leopold and his chancellor. And, though I've never allowed you to have a photograph taken since you were a child (I hate seeing young girls' faces in the newspapers and magazines: even though they are royal their features need not be public property and you have lived here in such seclusion that you've been little seen, still the rumor has reached Rhaetia that you are—good to look at. Leopold has been heard to say that whatever else his future empress of Rhaetia may be, he won't give his people an ugly woman to reign over them. And so altogether—"

"And so altogether, my references being satisfactory, at a pinch I might do for the place," cut in Virginia, with the hot, impatient rebellion of her youth. "Oh, mother, you think me mad or a fool, I know, and perhaps I am mad, yet not mad enough not to see that it would be a great thing, a wonderful thing, to be asked in marriage by the one man in my world if—ah, that great if—he had only seen and fallen in love with me. It might have happened, you know. As you say, I'm not ugly, and I can be rather pleasant if I choose—so I believe. If he had only come to this land to see what I was like, as royal men did in the dear old fairy stories, and then had asked me to be his wife, why, I should have been convinced enough to think it was because he loved me even more than because of other things. Then should have been happy—yes, dear, I'll confess to you now—almost happy enough to die of the great joy and triumph of it. But now I'm not happy. I still marry Leopold or I'll marry no man, but I swear to you I won't be married to Leopold in Count von Breitslein's hateful old, cold, cut and dried way."

"It's the emperor's way as well as von Breitslein's."

"Then for once in his big, grand, obstinate life he'll have to learn that there's one insignificant girl who won't play Rhaetia even for the sake of being his princess!"

The girl proclaimed this resolve, rising to her feet with her head high and a look in her gray eyes which told the grand duchess that it would be hopeless for her to argue down the resolution. At first it was a proud look and a sad look, but suddenly a beam of light flashed into it and began to sparkle and twinkle. Virginia smiled and showed her dimples. Her color came and went. In a moment she was a different girl, and her mother, bewildered, fearful still, dared to hope something of the change.

"How old you look," she exclaimed. "You've thought of something. You are happy. You have the air of—of having found some plan."

"It's Count von Breitslein," the girl answered, laughing. "All suddenly, just in a flash. That's the way it must be with inspirations. This is one—I know it. It's all in the count's round me. But I shall grasp it soon."

She came and to her mother, still smiling, and knelt down in the grass at her feet, looking up with radiance in her eyes.

Luckily there was no one save the Dresden china lady and the birds and the flowers to see her. The princess threw her mantle of dignity away, for the two did not keep royal state and a royal retinue in the quaint old house at Hampton Court, and the big elm which Virginia loved kindly hid the mother and daughter from intrusive eyes.

"You do love me, my child, though I don't pretend to understand you," cried the grand duchess, well aware that she was about to be coaxed into some scheme, feeling that she would yield and praying Providence that the yielding might not lead her into tribulation.

MR. BRYAN'S OPINIONS

The plan of guaranteed bank deposits has probably found favor, among all classes of people and irrespective of political affiliation, more rapidly than any other public question.

The new state of Oklahoma has already enacted a law taxing state banks, the fund thus accumulated to be used in paying the depositors of any state bank that from any cause becomes unable to meet its obligations. A special session of the Kansas legislature has been called for the purpose of enacting legislation similar to the Oklahoma plan. The governor of Nebraska is considering the advisability of calling a special session of the legislature on account of the growing belief among the people that protection to bank depositors in the form of state or federal guarantees of their deposits will stop the hoarding of money, bring into circulation sufficient currency to conduct the business of the country, and prevent a recurrence of such disastrous panics as the one through which we are now passing.

Mr. Bryan has been an advocate of a law guaranteeing deposits in state and national banks since 1893. Mr. Bryan, in discussing the tariff questions, insists that residents of the United States should be permitted to buy home-made goods at home at as low a price as the foreigner can buy American-made goods abroad. He also insists that our government should be by and for the people as a whole, rather than by and for the trusts, and administered in the interest of a few beneficiaries of the trust system. He believes that national legislation for the purpose of better regulation and control of interstate commerce and common carriers should supplement state legislation, and not be a substitute for state legislation.

Mr. Bryan's paper, The Commoner, reflects his opinions each week on questions of public importance and in its columns may also be found his magazine articles, public speeches, addresses and lectures, which are referred to in the daily press from day to day.

If you are interested in political questions, if you desire to keep in touch with the progress of the campaign and to read Mr. Bryan's campaign speeches send sixty cents to The Commoner, and the paper will be sent to you each week until the close of the next presidential campaign.

Postoffice money order, currency or stamps will be accepted. Only sixty cents. Address The Commoner, Lincoln, Neb.

CHAS. M. MEACHAM.

"Of course I will," said the grand duchess, carried out of her pretty little conventional self into unwonted looseness by the warmth of kisses soft and sweet as the roses on Virginia's bosom.
"That is I will if I can. But I don't at all see what I can do."
"I see. And what I want you to do is to please, please see with my eyes."
"They're very bright ones," smiled her mother.
Princess Virginia clasped the grand duchess round the waist so lightly that it hurt. Then she laughed a loud, half-frightened, excited laugh. "Dearest, something perfectly wonderful is going to happen to you and me," she said. "The most wonderful thing that has happened. We are going to have an event—adventure. And what the end of it will be—I don't know."

CHAPTER TWO

THE WILGITT fell late in the tiny Rhæthian village of Alleheiligen. So high on the mountain side were perched the simple inn and the group of brown chalets, clustering round the big church with its bulbous oriental spire, that they caught the last red rays of sunset and held them fast on burnished copper roof plates and jeweled small, bright window panes long after the green twilight below was curtained with shadow.

One September evening two dusty traveling carriages topped the steep, winding road that led to the highest hamlet of the Rhæthian Alps, and a girl walking beside the foremost driver (mistaken as he was, to save the jaded horses) looked up, to see Alleheiligen glittering like a necklace of gems on the brown throat of the mountain. Each window was a great, separate ruby set in gold; the copper bulb that crowned the church spire was a burning carbuncle, while above the flaming halo of gorgeous color the mountain reared its head, facing westward, its stoutest features carved in stone, the brow snow capped and rose where the sun touched it, blue where the shadows lay.

The girl assured the young English lady, whom he much admired for her pluck as well as beauty, that she had far better return to the carriage; that indeed she need not have left it. Her extra weight would be but as that of a feather to the horses, which were used to carrying far heavier loads than that of today up the steep mountain road to Alleheiligen in the "high" season of July and August, when many tourists from all countries came to rest for a moment and see the wonderful view. He even grew voluble in his persuasions, but the girl smilingly insisted that she liked walking, and the brown faced fellow with the soft green hat and curly cock feather admired her more for her firmness and endurance.

She was plainly dressed in gray, which did not show the dust, and, though her skirt and short jacket were well made and her neat little hat jaunty and becoming—almost dangerously becoming—she was not half as grand in appearance as some of the ladies who drove up with him in July and August. Still, the man said to himself, there was an air about her—no; he could not describe it even to himself—but it seemed to him that she was English. It was as pleasing as it was remarkable that she could speak Rhæthian so prettily. She had learned it, he said, when he respectfully ventured a question, because since she was a child she had taken an interest in Rhæthian history and literature. And this time when he turned to him—so dainty a lady should have learned such a language for pleasure, because the people of most countries found it excessively difficult—as difficult as Hungarian and just enough like German to make it even more difficult perhaps. But this English girl said she had picked it up easily, and the young man's heart warmed to her when she praised Rhæthian music and Rhæthian poets.

This was the last touch. This won her, and she was stopping further to analyze or account for his admiration of the driver of the first carriage found himself bestowing condolences upon his gracious companion as they slowly tramped up the winding road, the reins looped over his arm.

He told her of his life—how he had not always lived down here in the valley and driven tourists for a living.

Before he fell in love and married a valley girl and had a young family to rear his house had been more in Alleheiligen. He was born on the mountain side. His mother still lived in the village. It was she who kept the inn—she, but a good woman and a cook to the king's taste, or, rather, the emperor's taste, if it was her own son who was the inn. He was glad that the English ladies would be staying with her for a few days at this season. She would make them comfortable, more comfortable than would be possible at a crowded time, and then, besides, after the season was over and the strangers had been frightened away by the first flurry of snow, the poor mother grew lonely and tired of idleness. Oh, yes, she stayed the winter through. It was home to her. There were not many neighbors then, it was true, yet she would not be happy to go away. Mountain folk never really learned to love the valleys.

What! The ladies had not written to the inn in advance? Ah, well, that would not matter at this season. The ladies could take their choice, and the mother would have a pleasant surprise. Glad he was that he chanced to be the one to bring it.

Those who knew Frau Yorvan knew that her ladder was never empty of good things and that her linen was aired and scented with the dried lavender blossoms gathered down below. Indeed, she had need to be ever in readiness for distinguished guests, because sometimes—But the eloquent tongue of Alois Yorvan was suddenly silent, like the clapper of a church bell which the ringers have ceased to pull, and his sunburnt face grew sheepish.

"Because sometimes?" echoed the girl in her pretty Rhæthian. "What happens sometimes that your mother must ever be expecting?"

"Oh," the man stammered, a little foolishly, "I am not going to say that she has sometimes to entertain people of the high nobility of different nations. Alleheiligen, though small, is rather celebrated, you know."

"Has your emperor been here?" asked the young lady.

"It may be," answered Alois jauntily; "it may be. Our emperor has been to most places."

His companion smiled and put no more questions.

Slowly they climbed on the two carriages, containing the English girls, mother, a middle aged companion, a French maid and a reasonable supply of luggage, toiling up behind, the harness jingling with a faint sound, as of fairy bells.

Then at last they came to the inn, a quaint house, half of stone, half of rich brown shingles, a huge picture crowded with the most important of Alleheiligen painted in once crowded, now faded, colors on a swinging sign. A characteristic yodeling cry from Alois went forth before the highest turn of the road was reached, brought an apple checked and white capped old woman to the door. Then it was the youngest of the travelers who asked, with a pleasant greeting in Rhæthian, for the best suit of rooms which Frau Yorvan could give.

But, to the girl's astonishment, the landlady showed none of the delight her son had predicted. Surprised she certainly was, even startled and certainly embarrassed. For an instant she seemed to hesitate before replying; then her emotion was partly explained by her words. Unfortunately her best rooms were engaged—four of the bedrooms the choicest view and one private sitting room the inn possessed. But if the ladies would put up with the second best she would gladly accommodate them. Would it but be for the night? Oh, for several nights! (Again the apple face looked dubious.) Well, if the ladies would graciously enter and choose from what she had to offer she would be pleased.

They did enter and presently wrote their names as Lady Mowring, Miss Mowring, Miss Manchester and command. And when the new-comers, mother, daughter and dame de compagnie—sat down to a hot supper in a bedchamber hastily but skilfully transformed into a private dining room the youngest of the three remarked to Frau Yorvan upon the peaceful stillness of her house.

"One would think there wasn't a soul about the place except ourselves," said she, "yet you've told us you have other guests."

"The gentlemen who are stopping here all day long in the mountains," explained Frau Yorvan. "It is now the time for chamois hunting, and it is for that and also the climbing of a strange group of rocks called the Bunch of Needles, only to be done by great experts, that they come to me."

"They are out late this evening. Aren't you beginning to be a little anxious about them if they go to such dangerous places?"

"Oh, tonight, gracious fraulein, they will not return at all," said the landlady, warming impulsively to the subject. "They often stop at a kind of hut they have near the top of the mountain to begin some climb they may wish to undertake very early. They are much closer to it there, you see, and it saves their wasting several hours in the habit of stopping at the hut in fine weather. But they are very considerate. They always let me know their plans beforehand."

"If they're away so much I think it a little selfish in them to keep your one private sitting room when you might need it for others," remarked the girl.

"Oh, but gracious fraulein, you must not say that!" cried the old woman, looking as much shocked as if her young guest had broken one of the commandments.

COURT CASES THIS WEEK.

Pat Breslin Loses a Damage Suit To The Extent of $500.00.

TINSLEY CASE SETTLED.

Other Matters Disposed Of
of More or Less Public Interest.

In Circuit Court Monday a verdict of $500 was returned in the damage suit of Herbert Mockhee against P. J. Breslin for $2000, growing out of the explosion of a gas tank used to operate a corn popper. Mockhee is a small boy, who conducted the popper for Breslin, who is a merchant on Main street.

The famous Tinsley case was reopened Tuesday and the court, after hearing the statements of Drs. W. E. Reynolds, J. H. Rice, F. M. Stites and F. P. Thomas who had been appointed to examine the child, decided that Mr. and Mrs. Tinsley should have the custody of their little daughter Margaret, over whom there has been a spirited contest in court between her parents and her grandmother, Mrs. Mary L. P'Pool. The grand-mother was given the temporary custody of the little girl about ten days ago.

Late Tuesday afternoon the case of D. D. Turner against the Illinois Central railroad was given to the jury. After consulting for a while a verdict was arrived at and Turner was awarded $250 damages. Turner, in his petition, stated that on the evening of Jan. 20, 1907, while on his way from Gracely to Cerulean the conductor of defendant's train forcibly ejected him therefrom. In his testimony he stated that he had bought a ticket at Gracely but could not find it about his person when the conductor demanded it. When the train was stopped three of his friends asked the conductor not to put him off, and they would pay the fare for him, nevertheless he was ejected. The case involved a nice point of law, in which the court, in its instructions to the jury, advised them that a tender of money does not consist in one's saying that he will pay money, but he must actually produce the money and offer it to the person. This, the defense maintained the gentlemen did not do, and was the ground of defense by defendant. It was proven that Turner was under the influence of whis-

DAVID SMITH REMOVED ON A TECHNICALITY

Failure to Execute the Annual Bond
Required by March 1st of Each Year.

County Judge C. O. Prowse yesterday afternoon made an order removing Sheriff David Smith and appointing John M. Renshaw, as Sheriff until January 1910. The reason assigned was a failure to execute a new annual bond and to produce a quietus from the State and County for the previous year, on or before the first day of March.

Mr. Smith quickly produced his quietus from the State and also tendered a new bond, but Judge

Prowse refused to accept the bond and the order remains until passed upon by the courts.

It is not claimed that the Sheriff's accounts are not in good condition and that he is abundantly able to obtain a county quietus. The action is based on the failure to secure the bond, a technical oversight.

Mr. Smith is a Democrat, who was elected by 25 votes over the Republican nominee in 1905. Mr. Renshaw is a prominent Republican.

BIG SALE OF BURLEY

Made by Society at Price for Which Pool Was Formed.

Frankfort, Ky., March 11.—President Clarence Lebus, of the Burley Tobacco Society, branch of the Society of Equity, announced here that a sale of 1,000 hogheads of burley tobacco was made today to the American Tobacco Company. The price paid was 15 cents per pound, the price for which the burley growers have been contending since they organized to pool and withhold the crops from the so-called Tobacco Trust, came to their terms. This is the first sale made to the American Tobacco Company since the fight began two years ago. The sale was consummated at Winchester, where samples of the tobacco are stored in warehouses.

FULL KIT.

Soldiers Will Have No Excuse For Untidiness.

Washington, March 9.—The recent order which supplies to an army recruit, upon his enlistment, a full kit of toilet articles, has run the gauntlet of judicial construction and has been sustained. As a result, this is what the enlisted man gets in addition to his regular outfit: Razor, brushes for hair, teeth, shaving and shoes, comb, polish for black and tan shoes, two towels, toilet soap, whisk broom and last, but not least, "one housewife." The housewife is explained to be a neat little case containing thread, needle, buttons and patches.

DIRECTOGO 34217.

In the Stud Season of 1908-1909, This Being His Home and is Here to Stay. Christian County's Best Bred Trotting Stallion, Also the Best Indiv dual.

DIRECTOGO is a dark, rich mahogany bay, 15½ hands high, two hind white feet and as fine a boned horse as you ever saw. Has natural style, speed and action at all times in or out of harness.

His colts have action like horses that have been educated. Directogo is double gaited and some of his colts are the best of combined horses.

Directogo is the only 9-year-old horse here or ever was here that has a colt with a record. Ruby Fry, colt of Directogo, making a record of 2:13½ last fall in Pennsylvania, in the 7th heat. How is this for speed and durability?

For racing or road use you can't make a mistake by breeding to Directogo, and for sale horses you can refer back to last fall during the panic and money scare when four two-year-olds, unbroken, and one three-year-old, broken, averaged over $250 per head, at VanCleve's sale, these being all of his get sold in this sale.

Directogo will make the season of 1908 at my stable, Hopkinsville, Ky., and we will be glad to have you look him over, ask for tabulated pedigree, and you will see the best bred horse in Western Kentucky.

TERMS: $20.00 cash or bankable note, with return privileges.

We have grass paddocks and box stalls for any that want to leave their mares. Will use every precaution to avoid accident, but no responsibility should any occur.

Very respectfully,
J. E. COOPER.

gomery County, Tenn.

Clarksville, Tenn., March 10.—About 2 o'clock Sunday morning the large stock barn of John R. Edmondson, who lives near the seven-mile Ferry, was mysteriously burned, and with it five mules, three horses, 125 barrels of corn, about seven tons of hay, one buggy, a lot of farm implements and all of his harness. The fire represents a loss between $2,000 and $2,500, with no insurance.

REV. W. F. CASHMAN,

Late of This City, Laid Up With Broken Arm.

The many friends here of Rev. W. F. Cashman, late of the Hopkinsville circuit, will regret to learn that he is laid up with a broken arm and lame back at his home in Russellville. In a letter to a friend here Mr. Cashman did not state how he had received his injuries, merely stating that he is not able to get away from home.

A STRICKEN FAMILY.

Death of Son, Father, Mother and Daughter Ill.

Lee Harris, the nine-year-old stepson, of Mr. Lee Jenkins, died Saturday night of pneumonia. The body was placed in the vault at Greenwood Sunday afternoon to await the interment. This child was one of twins, the other, a sister, is in a critical condition. Mr. Lee Jenkins, the step-father, is so serio uly ill that but little hope is entertained of his recovery, while the mother is very low with consumption. Those who were present at the home (which is near Kennedy) Sunday afternoon, witnessed a scene of supreme sadness. Stalwart men, as women, shed tears as they saw the heart-broken mother in her deep grief fill in a swoon. The little boy, as well as the girl, was greatly loved, and his death, with the other afflictions of the family, occasions the warmest sympathy of all the community. —Clarksville Leaf Chronicle.
